CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Clarksburg Citizen Knows
How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Clarksburg. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. M. Cross, 240 E. Pike street, Clarksburg, W. Va., says: "I suffered severely from kidney complaint for several years and became so discouraged that I did not care whether I lived or died. My back was so lame and weak that I was forced to walk in a stooped position and I was scarcely able to get around. My kidneys were weak and I was caused much annoyance by irregular passages of the kidney secretions. After taking many remedies without relief, Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention and I procured a box at Wells & Haymaker's drug store. They completely cured me and my back is now as strong as ever." (Statement given November 25, 1902).

Confirmed Proof.
On July 8, 1907, Mr. Cross confirmed his previous statement in the following words: "I am just as enthusiastic in my praise of Doan's Kidney Pills as when I publicly recommended them in 1902. I have noticed some slight attacks of backache since then, brought on by hard work, but Doan's Kidney Pills have quickly removed the trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McIlburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Charming Hair

Every Woman Can Have It By Using
Parisian Sage Manufactured by Wells & Haymaker.

There is a reason for the phenomenal sale of Parisian Sage in the United States since it was first introduced into America, and the sales this year are breaking all records.

Ask Wells & Haymaker Company about it. They will tell you that they rigidly guarantee it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

There is no reason whatever why any man or woman should fail to take advantage of the above generous offer.

But one thing that has made Parisian Sage so famous is its peculiar power to turn the harsh, unattractive hair that many women possess into luxuriant and radiant hair in a short time. Women of refinement the country over are using it and it never disappoints.

Sold by leading druggists everywhere and in Clarksburg by Wells & Haymaker Company for 50 cents a large bottle. The girl with the Auburn hair is in every package; mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by the American makers, Gloux Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

"But I must do something, my boy. I can't accept so great a kindness unless," said Graham, with a timid flash of hope, "you'll consider a partnership."

"That's it!" cried Duncan, glad of any way out of the situation. "That's the way to do it—a partnership. No, please don't say any more about it just now. We can settle details later. We've got to get busy. Tell you what I'll do while I'm bursting open those boxes. If you don't mind going down to the station to make sure that everything's—"

"Yes, I'll go; I'll go at once," Sam groped for Duncan's hand, caught and held it between both his own. "If—if fate or something hadn't brought you here today I don't know what would have happened to Betty and me."

"Never mind," Duncan tried to soothe him. "Just don't you think about it."

Graham shook his head, still bewildered. "Perhaps," he stumbled on, "to a gentleman of your wealth $400 isn't much."

"No," said Duncan gravely without the flicker of an eyelash. "nothing." He remembered well the few dollars that now represented all his worldly goods. Then he smiled cheerfully. "There, that's all right."

"To me it's meant everything. I—I only hope I'll be able to repay you some day. God bless you, my boy! God bless you!"

He managed to jam his hat awry on his white old head and find his way out, his hands fumbling with one another, his lips moving inaudibly, perhaps in a prayer of thanksgiving.

It was perhaps within the next thirty minutes that Betty (who had been left in charge of the store while Duncan, with coat and collar off and sleeves rolled above his elbows, back and pounded and pried and banged at the packing cases in the back yard sought him on the scene of his labors.

"Pretty good work for a York dude—not?" he laughed.

There was a shadowy smile in her grave eyes. "It's an improvement," she said evenly.

He shot her a curious glance. "Ouch!" he said thoughtfully.

"I just came to tell you," she went on, again immobile, "you're wanted inside."

"Somebody wants to see me?" he demanded of her retreating back.

"Yes."

"But who?"

"Blinky Lockwood," she replied over her shoulder as she went into the house.

"Lockwood?" He speculated for an instant puzzled, then suddenly "Fa-ther-in-law!" he cried. "Shivering snakes, he mustn't catch me like this—I, a business man!"

Hastily rolling down his shirt sleeves and shuffling himself into his coat, he made for the store, buttoning his collar and knotting his tie on the way.

He found Blinky nosing round the room, quite alone. Betty had disappeared, and the old scoundrel was having quite an enjoyable time poking in to matters that did not concern him and disapproving of them on general principles. So far as the improvements concerned old Sam Graham's fortunes, Blinky would concede no health in them. But with regard to Duncan there was another story to tell.

"You're Mr. Duncan, ain't you?" he asked, with his leer, moving down to meet him.

"Yes, sir. Mr. Lockwood, I believe?"

"That's me," Blinky clutched his hand in a genial claw. "I'm glad to meet you."

"Thank you," said Duncan. "Something I can do for you, sir?"

"Waal, Pete Willis was tellin' me you'd just took up this note of Graham's."

"Not exactly. The firm took it up. Blinky winked savagely at this. "The firm—what firm?"

"Graham & Duncan," sir. I've been taken into partnership."

"Have, eh?" Blinky granted mysteriously and fished in his pocket for some bills and silver. "Waal, here's some change comin' to the firm, then. And here," he added, producing the document in question, "is Sam's note."

"Thank you," Duncan ceremoniously deposited both in the till, going behind the soda fountain to do so, and then waited, expectant. Blinky was grunting busily in the key of one about to make an important communication.

"I'm glad you're a-comin' in here with Sam," he said at length, with an acid grimace that was meant to be a smile.

"Oh, it may be only temporary," he endeavored to assume a serene expression and partially succeeded. "I'm devoting much of my time to my studies," he murmured proudly, "but nevertheless feel I should be earning something too."

"That's right—that's the kind of spirit I like to see in a young man. You always go to church, don't you?"

"No, sir—Sundays only."

"That's what I mean. Do you drink?"

"Oh, no, sir," Duncan parroted glibly, "don't smoke, drink, swear, and on Sundays I go to church."

The bland smile which he faced Lockwood's keen scrutiny disarmed suspicion.

EVERY CLAIM FULLY PROVEN

I make no claims for Martin's Rheumatic and Blood Elixir that I do not fully prove by the most substantial evidence.

Pat Varley, a well known livery man of Parkersburg, W. Va., writes:

"T. M. Martin, Dear Sir: I want to say a few words in favor of Martin's Rheumatic and Blood Elixir. I have used this medicine for stomach trouble, and as a general tonic I am free to say that I believe it is one of the best remedies for the complaints for which it is recommended that I have ever known."

Martin's Rheumatic and Blood Elixir has proven that there is no medicine sold that will compare with it for Rheumatism, Liver, Kidney and Stomach troubles, Constipation, and all diseases arising from impure blood.
